

Abstract

The present invention provides a method for manufacturing a glycoprotein having a mammalian-type or human-type sugar chain comprising a step in which a transformed plant cell is obtained by introducing to a plant cell a gene encoding a glycosyltransferase enzyme and a gene encoding an exogenous glycoprotein, and a step in which the obtained transformed plant cell is cultivated.